Roberts Robi brings DAB to your iPod

Add-on tuner to launch

by Amy-Mae Elliott published on 29 October 2007

Lack of radio tuner has long been a criticism for Apple's iconic MP3 player - something that Roberts is to address with a new accessory that allows users to tune into DAB and FM radio on their iPods.

We brought you the news that Roberts were planning this product earlier this year - and now we can reveal it will be in shops this month.

The "Robi" is a "discreet" DAB radio with a wired remote that plugs into the iPod. As well as operating the radio function, the wired remote lets you control music playback and adjust volume.

Compatible with the iPod and iPod nano, this runs on power from the 'pod and will cost £50.
