WEBSITE OF THE DAY - CQout.com

An auction site to challenge eBay?

by Ian Hughes published on 13 November 2007

Welcome to the UK's second most popular auction site. We've wracked our brains trying to think of the number one, but for the moment it escapes us...

Anyway, is it any good?

It's packed with features such as advanced searching for both items and users, instant buying, traders' feedback etc, and it's easy to negotiate. It's also not littered with anywhere near the amount of junk that eBay is sometimes.

That said, it delivers a fraction of the results too. A few random searches proved almost fruitless and to be honest it lacked the feel (for want of a better word) of it's well-established rival. It also seemed a little slow to deliver results.

You might find what you're looking here, but I reckon most people will still try eBay first. Early days though I guess...
