Keep yourself in the picture

by Katie Scott published on 6 December 2007

Fromm Works has followed up the launch of Quik Pod extendable tripod with a new model designed for SLR users.

Equally as compact as the first, handheld tripod, the SLR version can be used either as an extension of the photographer's arm - to take difficult shots or to take images with the photographer in - as well as being convertible for table top use. It can hold cameras weighing up to around 900g, and extends out to 53 inch.

All of the Quik Pods come with a built-in self-positioning mirror to allow the photographer to centre their shots.

Both the point and shoot as well as DSLR model attach to any camera or camcorder using a standard tripod socket.

The Quik Pod DSLR tripod is available for around £25.
