

<http://www.pocket-lint.com/news/12559/pyramat-pc-gaming-chair-subwoofer>

Pyramat launches PC gaming chair

Promises to let you feel the force of your games

by Stuart Miles published on 31 January 2008

Pyramat, the company that brought console gamers a chair with built-in subwoofer and speakers has turned its attention to PC gamers.

Launched at the Toy Show in London's Excel convention centre the new chair, called the PC Gaming Chair 2.1, will look more like a regular office chair compared to the more laid back approach for the console version.

The executive style office look chair connects wirelessly to a PC through a built-in digital wireless receiver and features two full range speakers and a PowerSub subwoofer.

The chair also has an input for MP3s and an armrest mounted wheel and touch controls.

The chair's makers say it will work with all games available on the PC.

You can expect to pay around £149.99.

