Get together and play

by Ian Hughes published on 12 February 2008

If social networking is the new going out, then this place is definitely the new adventure playground.

A place where gamers can meet, chat and of course play together is a great twist on the social networking genre as it gives people a real purpose to being there in the first place.

The competitive side is a little healthier too - how many people do you know who're totally obsessed with having more "friends" on their Facebook page than you?

Get them to meet you here and you can kick their behind at Pong instead.
