

<http://www.pocket-lint.com/news/13889/falcon-digital-frame-fridge-magnet>

Digital photo frame fridge magnet launches

Display pics in your kitchen in a 21st century stylee

by Amy-Mae Elliott published on 9 April 2008

Displaying fave pics in the kitchen by sticking them to the fridge with a magnet has just been given a kerazy 21st century twist with the launch of a new product from Falcon.

They've taken a digital photo frame, shrunk it down to give it a 2.4-inch, 320 x 240 resolution display and added a magnetic back that gives us the fridge-magnet-photo-frame mix-up that we see before us today.

With internal memory of 32MB for a claimed 66 JPEG, BMP or GIF images that can be displayed as a slideshow, the digi-frame can also be paused on a favourite picture.

You'll get 11 hours of images from full battery charge, it's wipe clean and does offer a stand for ordinary frame-like display, should that be more your thing. Available now from Thumbs Up, the frame is £30.

