Swisscom to offer 3G iPhone

In silver, black and white

by Amy-Mae Elliott published on 14 May 2008

The iPhone's international roll-out continues with the news that Swisscom will offer the device in Switzerland.

Although the official statement from the telecoms co was brief, merely confirming a deal had been done with Apple, local news sources are filling in the gaps by claiming the carrier will get the unconfirmed 3G model.

Newspaper Le Matin is claiming that the version for sale in Switzerland will boast video-conferencing, mobile television and GPS and will go on sale in June.

Since the announcement Swisscom's website has leaked pricing for the 3G 16GB model that will apparently be available in silver, but the 32GB offering will come in silver, black and white.
