

<http://www.pocket-lint.com/news/14663/fujitsu-siemens-xi2550-blu-ray-laptop>

Fujitsu Siemens Amilo Xi 2550 launches

"Your very own mobile cinema"

by Amy-Mae Elliott published on 14 May 2008

Fujitsu Siemens has launched the Amilo Xi2550 that it says "presents entertainment without constraint".

The AMILO Xi 2550 is equipped with Intel Core 2 Duo processor up to T9300, the latest ATI graphic card, HD 2700, Intel PRO/Wireless 4965AGN for high-speed online connections and a high resolution 17-inch display with 1920 x 1200 pixels.

Describing the notebook as "your very own mobile cinema", FSC offers an optional Blu-ray Disc for high-def movie viewing. There's also a remote control, option for an external display via HDMI and multimedia LightTouch control panel.

"High-quality" loudspeakers and an integrated subwoofer claim to ensure a well-balanced sound which is no doubt helped by the "silent mode".

The Xi 2550 offers a hard disk capacity of up to 640GB, up to 4GB RAM, eSATA connection and optional Raid 0/1 function when using two hard disks, as well as Bluetooth, a 5-in-1 flash card reader and an integrated webcam.

The AMILO Xi2550 is available from retailers starting at 1500 euros - which works out as just under £1200.

