Is the Archos 3G PMP about to be announced in the UK?

Company to make "exciting announcement" at London event

by Amy-Mae Elliott published on 1 July 2008

Pocket-lint has received an invitation to an Archos press event that promises an "exciting announcement".

To be held on the 10 July at a London location, the announcement will be made by Tony Limrick, the UK managing director of French PMP-maker.

With the tag-line "entertainment your way" we can only speculate as to what might be revealed at the presentation.

One possible product that's due an unveiling soon is the 3G-enabled PMP that will allow surfing, streaming and downloads over the cellular network.

Archos has confirmed the device is in production and will be due on the market before the end of 2008.

Pocket-lint will be attending the event and will bring you all the news as it happens.
