Hitachi fattens up ultra-thin range with 47-inch TV

Just 35mm thick

by Katie Scott published on 5 August 2008

The 32-inch model arrived in the UK in May, but now Hitachi has launched two new, and bigger, Ultra Thin (UT) TVs to tempt us.

The UT47-XP770 and UT47-XV700 should be available in September, although there is no confirmation as yet of a UK arrival date.

They are just 35mm thick and feature a 47-inch full HD LCD panel (1920 x 1080), 250GB HDD, iVDR Module, and an HDMI interface (3 inputs/1 output).

The two models will be available in white or black for around 2865 euros.
