IFA 2008 Pocket-lint coverage

All the news from the show floor as it happens

by Stuart Miles published on 25 August 2008

IFA is almost upon us and Pocket-lint will be covering all the latest news as it happens from the Messe in Berlin.

The show will be starting on Thursday with previews of the latest tech on Wednesday night (UK time). Our coverage will carry on through the week and the weekend.

With HDTV now mainstream companies will be clambering over themselves to show us their new products that promise to give us the latest and greatest.

We already know about the new 38mm thick Philips television and the suspected arrival of new TomTom satnavs, but there will also be key announcement from all the major consumer electronics players including Sharp, Sony, Toshiba, Samsung, LG, Panasonic, JVC, Pure Digital, DivX ... the list goes on.

You can catch up with all the latest news and First Look reviews from the show in a number of ways on Pocket-lint.

Via our dedicated IFA channel, our show RSS feed, or news alerts directly to your inbox if you are a member.

Better still, if you sign-up to become a member, which is free by the way, you can even personalise our homepage to show just IFA news.

The IFA channel and feeds will be live from today for the next couple of weeks.
