Advert reveals spec for Sony's A-900 DSLR

Perhaps released a little too early...

Despite the fact it's not on Sony's schedule yet, these ads have been released that reveal a few details of the company's new full-frame A-900 DSLR.

We reported earlier that Sony would be announcing the new camera on 9 September, and this ad makes that even more likely.

The ad says the camera boasts a rather impressive spec, including 24.6 megapixels, Sony's Dual BIONZ image processing engine, "Intelligent Preview", a 3-inch Hybrid LCD, 5fps continuous shooting, and Sony's SteadyShot image stabilisation.

As you'd expect there's no price or release date on these adverts but hopefully we'll get a few more details come the beginning of next week.
