by Amy-Mae Elliott published on 5 September 2008

The Boy Genius Report has revealed specs for LG's forthcoming Prada II handset, its follow-up to the designer device announced back in January 2007.

The info, from a "trustworthy source", sees the new quad-band model get a slide-out QWERTY keyboard, HSDPA connectivity and a 5-megapixel camera with flash and VGA recording.

In addition, there's talk of a 3-inch, 240 x 400 resolution screen, FM radio, Wi-Fi, Bluetooth, and a motion sensor. There's no word on a release just yet, but watch this space, etc, etc.
