

<http://www.pocket-lint.com/news/17596/tesco-offers-dell-inspiron-z530>

Tesco offers 12-inch Dell Inspiron "web browser"

Unannounced Z530 leaked by supermarket

by Amy-Mae Elliott published on 12 September 2008

Tesco appears to have leaked a new netbook from Dell, offering the machine on an "email me when it's in stock" basis for its supposed availability around 6 October.

Running Linux "Ubuntu", the Dell Inspiron Z530 is described by the supermarket as a 12-inch "Web Browser" and is priced at £299 - the same as the 8.9-inch Inspiron Mini 9 launched recently.

The spec listed on the site grants the little notebook, offering an "ultra mobile web experience" a 40GB hard drive, 1GB RAM and Intel's Atom processor.

Available in black, there's also a three-in-one memory card reader, three USB ports and 802.11b/g wireless.

We have contacted Dell in the UK for comment and received a brief statement - "we cannot comment on unannounced product" - in reply, so we guess we'll have to wait 'til 6 October to know more.

