LG Prada II coming in November

Will hit Europe first

by Katie Scott published on 26 September 2008

A very reliable source, who may or may not be an LG employee, has told us that the hotly anticipated successor to the LG Prada phone is going to arrive in Europe in November.

And the fashion phone will be coming to this continent first.

The Prada II handset, according to the Boy Genius Report, is going to sport a slide-out QWERTY keyboard, HSDPA connectivity and a 5-megapixel camera with flash and VGA recording.

In addition, there's talk of a 3-inch, 240 x 400 resolution screen, FM radio, Wi-Fi, Bluetooth, and a motion sensor.
