

<http://www.pocket-lint.com/news/18218/incrudo-titanium-bejewelled-hard-drive>

Incrudo launches bejewelled hard drive

Titanium touchness (but at a price)

by Katie Scott published on 7 October 2008

It may be built of the same material as is used in space shuttles and Formula 1 racing cars, but would you really want to fork out $831 for a hard drive?

It's gutting if you lose a drive with a load of data on it, but if you mislaid the Incrudo, you'd have to remortgage to buy a new one.

This 8GB flash drive is covered with pure titanium, sports a ruby and is claimed to be tough enough to withstand a fair amount of throwing about (but, seriously, would you not keep it in a velvet lined box?).

It's available now.

