Goldstriker announces Nokia "Princess Edition"

New diamond-encrusted mobile to cost as much as a small car

by Amy-Mae Elliott published on 22 December 2008

Goldstriker has upped its game, as far as pricing goes, and will offer a £12,000 blinged up Nokia 8800 in January.

The Nokia "Princess Edition" will boast 8.2 carats of diamonds on the front and rear, solid platinum for those who think the leather finish on the phone isn't posh enough and will be housed in an individual handmade, leather-lined, granite or marble box.

Due to be launched in the Colette store in Paris, if you can afford the phone, then the little jaunt across the Channel to pick one up shouldn't present too much of a problem.
