Crowds start to gather for Macworld keynote

Macworld 2009: ...well first two anyway

by Stuart Miles published on 6 January 2009

It might not be featuring Apple CEO Steve Jobs, but that doesn't mean the fanboys aren't out already for the Macworld 2009 Apple keynote in San Francisco later today.

That's right, two chaps are already standing in queue to bag their space in the first keynote by Phil Schiller, senior vice president of worldwide product marketing at Apple.

Nick (right) and his chum are bunking school and camping out over night in San Fran dodging requests from tramps to get in first.

Pocket-lint will be live at the Apple keynote kicking off Macworld in San Francisco from 6pm (GMT) tonight.

Stay tuned.
