BMW designs futuristic PC case

Level10 created for Thermaltake

by Amy-Mae Elliott published on 9 March 2009

BMW has created a futuristic PC case for Thermaltake's 10th anniversary. From BMW Group Designworks USA the "Level10" isn't your average PC casing.

Instead of all the computer's components going into a big rectangular box, individual components such as the motherboard, hard drives, optical drives and PSU get their own compartments, attached to a pedestal base.

A concept at this stage, the Level10 is due to be officially released in June for between 450 and 600 euros.
