

<http://www.pocket-lint.com/news/23454/denon-dp-200usb-usb-vinyl-converter>

Denon launches USB record recorder

Convert your vinyl to MP3 with the DP-200USB

by Amy-Mae Elliott published on 8 April 2009

Denon has introduced the DP-200USB, a fully automatic turntable with USB port and built-in MP3 encoder.

With this gadget vinyl lovers can convert all of their fave records to MP3 audio tracks without the need for a PC.

Denon claims at a simple push of a button to a connected USB memory stick or hard drive, records are recorded as MP3 files in 192 kbps quality.

The player is bundled with Trans Music Converter that features tools to edit tracks for those that do want to get their PC in on the action, with Gracenote metadata services able to add info to the files.

The Denon DP-200USB is available now for a suggested retail price of £199.99 in silver or black.

