

<http://www.pocket-lint.com/news/24275/lego-architecture-brickworks-series-launches>

New LEGO Architecture launches

LEGO for grown-ups

by Amy-Mae Elliott published on 22 May 2009

LEGO and a company called Brickstructures have unveiled an interesting new twist on a LEGO range - LEGO Architecture, the Frank Lloyd Wright Collection.

A collaboration between LEGO and "architectural artist" Adam Reed Tucker of Brickstructures, the new sets consist of two of Frank Lloyd Wright's most famous buildings - Fallingwater and the Solomon H. Guggenheim Museum.

As well as instructions, each building set includes a specially printed landmark name plate, an "inspiration booklet" containing facts, architectural significance and points of interest.

The sets are available to pre-order in the States now, joining already existing sets launched late last year, priced at $50, $100 or $145.

