by Ian Hughes published on 8 June 2009

If you're into politics, this past weekend has been more than a little interesting.

Despite the fact that most of us don't really know what the European Parliament actually does, the fact that the political map of Europe has been slowly changing colour is something that affects us all.

Interesting times ahead it would seem.

The BBC, as always, is a great place to see what's what, and their election coverage, including the real-time mapping is a cut above.
