LG GD910 watchphone arrives in the UK in August

Orange's touchscreen wrist-mobile nearly here

Orange has announced that the LG GD910, better known as the watchphone, will be hitting UK stores in August.

As previously reported on Pocket-lint, it will have a full touchscreen interface, 3G HSDPA and video-calling capabilities and will come complete with a Bluetooth headset.

It'll be available at an "exclusive price point", whatever that means, and you'll be able to get it on pay-as-you-go and SIM-only deals. Orange is also promising that more "Future Phones" will be coming before the end of the year - "at least three" of them, it says.

We've enquired with Orange about the pricing, and will update this post when we hear more.
