Michael Jackson memorial streams - time running out

Watch while you can

by Duncan Geere published on 8 July 2009

If you were planning on watching a web stream of Michael Jackson's memorial service on iPlayer, you need to get in there fast.

Rights restrictions mean that the ceremony at the Staples Centre in Los Angeles will only be legally viewable until 6pm today on the BBC's watch again service.

Of course, there's currently over 6000 people sharing a 2GB 1080p HD video of the event on the Pirate Bay, and no doubt it'll keep popping up on YouTube for some time.

Still, if you want to watch it without infringing copyright, then you'll need to get your skates on. It ends at 6pm tonight. Don't be late.
