Bogen launches Manfrotto 547B video tripod

Good for professional photographers looking for maximum stability

by Verity Burns published on 21 January 2009

Bogen Imaging has launched the 547B lightweight video tripod, the first tripod from Manfrotto with a 60mm bowl.

The 547B features an upper twin-leg and one stage construction that provides photographers with heightened rigidity, allowing for a 15kg payload.

The introduction of technopolymers into the upper casting and upper and lower collars of the 547B makes the tripod a good choice for professional use and offers maximum torsion rigidity and incredible stability.

A mid level fix spreader and retractable spiked feet are included with the 547B.

The 547B professional video tripod is available as a kit with the professional Manfrotto 701HDV and 501HDV fluid video heads.

The Manfrotto 547B is available from 7 February and will cost £199.95 on its own. Kit prices are to be announced.
