

<http://www.pocket-lint.com/news/6421/treadmill-keeps-dogs-fit-happy>

Dog Walker treadmill takes the strain out of exercising your puppy

When there's no time to take Fido for a walk

by Amber Maitland published on 29 January 2007

And now from Japan comes yet another slightly oddball gadget, the Dog Walker treadmill.

Instead of taking your dog for a walk thereby burning a few calories yourself and exercising with your pet, you can buy him or her a doggy-sized treadmill.

At the front are castors so the thing can be moved around your house, while at the sides are two shields so that your dog doesn't accidentally fall off.

The chance of hurting your pet is minimised as the speed has been limited from 0 to 5km/hour.

The dog in the picture looks none-too-happy; wonder how Pocket-lint's resident puppy, Boston, would take to it?

It costs around 15,800yen, or £66.

