

<http://www.pocket-lint.com/news/7648/sagem-mirrored-mobile-phone>

SAGEM launches my411x handset

Check your hair (and the web) with new mirrored phone

by Amy-Mae Elliott published on 8 May 2007

SAGEM's new slim and compact candy bar handset with a mirrored-front design launches today. The mirror feature could make it a festival favourite for the coming summer allowing you to check your appearance on the go in a very low-key way, and the reasonable price-tag means getting this handset a teensy bit mud-splattered won't do too much harm to your wallet.

The Sagem my411x is aimed at anyone who wants an attractive phone filled with all the must-have functions, at an affordable price. A tri-band handset which boasts a number of great features including MP3 music player for multimedia with short-cut buttons designed into the side, VGA camera with 4x digital zoom, Bluetooth and SyncML for PC connectivity and network access, WAP 2.0 for internet browsing and Java gaming.

Available now on Orange pay as you go at a price band of £49.99, on first glance this appears to be a good-looking basic phone at a good price.

