

<http://www.pocket-lint.com/news/8093/moving-house-help-advice-planner>

WEBSITE OF THE DAY - moveme.com

Moving house is mental. Official.
Maybe this will help

by Ian Hughes published on 11 June 2007

They say that moving home is the third most stressful thing you can go through after bereavement and divorce. Now I'm not sure who "they" are or whether it was the third fourth or even fifth most stressful thing to be honest, but it's certainly a right royal pain in the rear end.

This site really can help. You enter the postcodes of where you're moving from and to and the date you're uprooting and it spits out a personalised, easy to follow planner that will help guide you through the whole process.

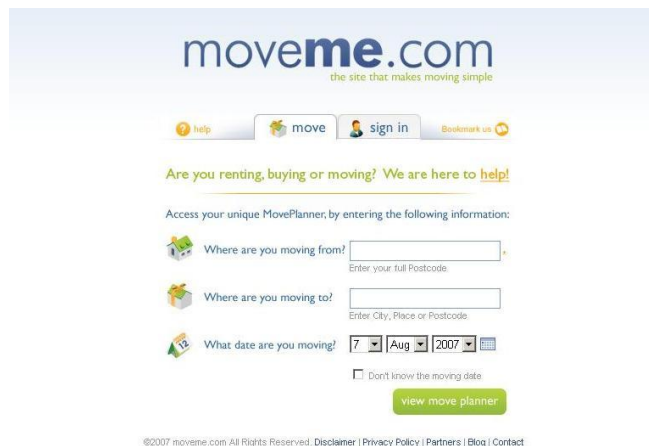

It gives you a to-do list full of all those bureaucratic tasks that are really tedious and often get left to the last minute.

Follow it closely and moving should be a breeze.

They can't do anything about your solicitor dragging their expensively-shod heels though I'm afraid.

www.moveme.com

If you have a website that you want to tell us about email us via the feedback form.

The screenshot shows the homepage of moveme.com, which is described as "the site that makes moving simple". The page features a navigation bar with links for "help", "move", "sign in", and "bookmark us". Below the navigation bar, there is a yellow banner that reads "Are you renting, buying or moving? We are here to help!". The main content area is titled "Access your unique MovePlanner, by entering the following information:" and contains three input fields: "Where are you moving from?" (with a sub-label "Enter your full Postcode"), "Where are you moving to?" (with a sub-label "Enter City, Place or Postcode"), and "What date are you moving?" (with a date picker showing "7 Aug 2007"). There is also a checkbox for "Don't know the moving date" and a green "view move planner" button. At the bottom of the page, there is a small copyright notice: "©2007 moveme.com All Rights Reserved. Disclaimer | Privacy Policy | Partners | Blog | Contact".