Mum of 7 invents Wiimote TV screen protector

Wii plus LCD carnage spurs invention

by Amy-Mae Elliott published on 1 August 2007

Following a damaging collision between a Nintendo Wii remote and a 42-inch LCD television, mother of seven, Emma Sands has developed a screen to protect TVs from Wii damage.

"I decided to design a screen protector to protect everyone's LCD or Plasma Screen from the ravages of young children and flying Nintendo Wii remotes."

Designed specifically for widescreen LCD and Plasma TV screens from 30 to 52 inches, this lightweight, durable protector rests on the top surface of your TV and is securely held in place by adjustable velcro straps.
