

<http://www.pocket-lint.com/news/9249/belkin-launches-tunecast-f8m010-transmitter>

Belkin launches Tunecast 3 universal FM transmitter

Stream audio to your FM stereo

by Amy-Mae Elliott published on 8 August 2007

The Belkin TuneCast 3 is a universal FM Transmitter that lets you listen to your music and movies through any FM stereo receiver.

An "enhanced" version of its predecessor, the TuneCast II, the TuneCast 3 is apparently even easier to use.

Its status indicator tells you when your memory presets have been saved, when it's processing a request, or when it's powering off or on.

The TuneCast 3 streams audio from any device with a 3.5mm headphone jack, such as MP3 players, portable DVD players, PSPs, CD players, and laptop computers.

With a new design, TuneCast 3 features cable management and a status indicator on the OLED screen to let you know when your presets have been saved.

It boasts a battery life of 20 hours and can save two station presets.

TuneCast 3 will be available in November in North America, with launches in Asia, Europe, and Australia to follow.

UK pricing will be £39.99.

